Mr. James H. Critchfield

STAT

Dear Mr. Critchfield:

I have recently been thinking about our taping session last spring. I recall that you indicated a sympathy with our desire to capture for the historical record the recollections of senior officers like yourself. I also remember that you expressed a willingness to talk further with us about your own career with the Agency.

If you still feel this way, I would like to set up another interview in the next several weeks with the idea of giving you an opportunity to supplement and expand upon some of the matters we touched upon last spring.

In addition, I would hope we could talk with some specificity about the job you held between 1960 and 1968. My interest here, of course, relates to our ongoing project on Richard Helms as Director of Central Intelligence.

I shall telephone you next week to see whether this proposal meets with your approval. I need not add, I trust, how much we appreciated your earlier help.

Sincerely,

STAT
